EDGAR COUNTY IN 1879

SKETCH OF EDGAR COUNTY

Edgar County lies in the eastern part of Illinois, and is bounded on the north by Vermilion County, on the west by Douglas and Coles, on the south by Clark County, and on the east by the State of Indiana. The county is approximately $23\frac{1}{2}$ miles wide by about 27 miles long. It is about 190 miles directly south of Chicago. Two Federal and State highways cross the County.

Between 1817-1830 immigrants from Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina, New York, Maine, and Massachusetts populated the land.

In the spring of 1817, Remember Blackman of New York, Aloysius Brown of Kentucky, Anthony Sanders of North Carolina, John Stratton and William Whitley of Kentucky brought themselves and their families to Edgar County, settling in its eastern portion of what now comprises Brouillett Creek, Hunter, Stratton, and the north portion of Elbridge townships.

At the time of its formation in 1823, Edgar County consisted of five election districts-Wayne, Pike, Fairfield, Carroll, and Ripley. These became the names of the first townships. These areas were widely different, and not made upon any natural basis, but to accommodate the settlers.

Such an arrangement continued until November 4, 1856, when, after several years of agitation, voters approved township organization. Originally thirteen in number, by the end of the War Between the States townships numbered fifteen.

The first white child born in the County is supposed to have been Charlotte Stratton, daughter of John Stratton. She was born in the fall of 1817 soon after her family came into Edgar county. A township was named after her father.

Paris, the county seat, was platted in 1823 on 26 acres of land donated by Samuel Vance. Despite arguments over the location of the seat of government, Paris, near the center of the County, won out.

Edgar County was named after Judge John Edgar, one of the first jurists of the Illinois territory.
